OVERVIEW

Nauru, a small island republic in the Pacific, runs its citizenship programme as the Economic and Climate Resilience Citizenship Programme (ECRCP). It is one of the newer options on the market and among the most affordable, and every contribution is directed to the country's climate-resilience work — coastal protection, water security and moving key infrastructure to higher ground.

Economic & Climate Resilience Contribution
USD 115,000 (single applicant)

A single non-refundable contribution to the Nauru Treasury Fund under the ECRCP, directed to the country's climate-resilience programme. Additional family members are...

KEY BENEFITS

- A newer, lower-cost second passport with a fully remote application
- Your contribution funds Nauru's climate-resilience programme
- No travel to Nauru required at any point
- Spouse, children, parents and siblings can be added
- Decision in roughly three months

HOW THE PROCESS WORKS
1 Eligibility & Pre-Check

We review your profile and run a confidential pre-assessment before anything is filed, to confirm you are well placed to clear...

3 Submission & Due Diligence

The application is submitted to the Nauru programme authority, which carries out background and due-diligence checks. No travel...

5 Citizenship & Passport

Your certificate of citizenship and passport are issued and delivered — typically around three months from a complete submission.

2 Document Preparation

We compile the application — passports, police certificates, source-of-funds evidence and supporting documents for every family...

4 Approval & Contribution

On approval in principle, the contribution to the Treasury Fund is made and the remaining formalities are completed.
